

Starting 2020

by P.J.Underwood, 27-May-20 02:50 PM GMT

After lockdown we are finally going out. Yesterday to Noah Hill and probably saw one of the last Dukes there, as all the cowslips were finished. Then today a walk in Botany Bay to the Triangle produced the largest number of Wood Whites that I have seen for some time—about 20. Unfortunately due to the heat and their continual activity it was almost impossible to get a good photo.

Good to see you out and about again PJ – you're just in time to start warming up for the Silly Season 😊😄

Have a goodun and stay safe

Looking forward to our annual meet up in a couple of weeks, Philip.
Good to hear of a strong Spring Wood White brood.

Stay safe and well,
Trevor.

Good to hear from you, Philip. 😊 There did seem to be a really good first brood of Wood Whites when I went down there recently too. Looking forward to the annual gathering as Trevor mentions – I suspect it may be on the early side this year by the way things have been going. 😊

All the best,

Dave

Nice to see you back, PJ.

I think if you wish to observe the Wood Whites you might have to earmark an early start – seems like unbroken sunshine and warm temperatures for at least another week.
